Skagit Gardens is looking for motivated interns who would like the opportunity to learn the many different aspects of annual and perennial production in the Pacific Northwest.

WHAT WE DO

We sell a comprehensive selection of top-quality annuals and perennials to premium growers, independent garden centers, nurseries and landscapers throughout North America. Our goal is to provide consistent availability of a wide selection of quality plants over a broad period of time; with the best varieties, the best quality and the best service available.

Flats in the greenhouse

WHO WE ARE

We are a wholesale greenhouse company located in the agricultural Skagit Valley, midway between Seattle, Washington and Vancouver, British Columbia. Our mild maritime climate provides the ideal growing conditions for hardy perennials. We overwinter many plants outside to provide our customers with perennials that are vernalized and sure to bloom the first year in the garden. These plants are also better able to withstand the rigors of spring frost than are those that are grown in the greenhouses all winter.

Sticking cuttings in Propagation

Automated watering system

JOB DESCRIPTION

Your experiences would involve working on various crews and seeing different departments of the company in action. Depending on the length of the internship, some of the areas in which you would work include:

- Propagation: asexual (cuttings, tissue culture) and sexual (seedlings)
- Transplant
- Soil preparation
- Crop care and maintenance
- Product preparation and quality control
- Research and development
- Trial garden maintenance
- Marketing

Field-grown perennials

BENEFITS

- Gain exposure to two distinct market segments in the horticultural industry: retail-ready products for independent garden centers and propagated plugs for growers
- Work with and observe some of the best horticulturalists in the industry
- Learn first hand why our area of the Pacific Northwest has the ideal climate for nurturing perennials
